In January, a devastating earthquake forced Haiti into the international spotlight.

In her lecture, former Haitian Prime Minister Claudette Werleigh explores the deeper issues behind the headlines when she discusses how true development, based on peace and justice, can enable all to live life to the full.

She draws on rich experience: "I have been blessed to have worked both in rich countries and one of the most impoverished ones, at grassroots level and at top level. I have learned that we all need to acknowledge our differences, to accept the other as equal and to cooperate in order to improve life."
