

Inequalities in Healthcare

Catholic Social Teaching and the Requirements of Justice

Introduction

The coalition Government has embarked on one of the most radical and broad ranging changes to the National Health Service in England since its creation.

These changes will affect many aspects of healthcare provision including:

- the way in which healthcare is commissioned
- who delivers care and where
- the role of public health the degree of localism,
- transparency and competition
- integration with social care

All this is playing out against a backdrop of funding cuts. So, what will the practical impact on health outcomes be? What are the risks of growing inequalities in healthcare? What do the principles of Catholic social teaching bring to an understanding and evaluation of the evidence so far?

A series of early evening seminars for healthcare professionals interested in exploring the connection between faith and health took place in 2012. You can still attend the final seminar in Newcastle.

Newcastle

Freeman Hospital, Education Centre. NE7 7DN

27 February 2013

5.30 - 9pm

Free

Attendance to each seminar is Free. To reserve a place please book online.

Online Booking

To register for the 'Inequalities in Healthcare' seminar series visit: www.catholicnews.org.uk/faith-in-health

